In this Feb. 15, 2015, file photo, a U.S. airman from the 356th Air Expeditionary Wing walks with the name of one of the crew members and their dog, and the name of another pilot's dog on the dog's shelter tag at Camp Arifjan, U.S. in Kuwait. (Photo by Larry W. Smith/EPA-EFE) An Air Force pilot in Kuwait lost the names of his dogs on their tags and was left to find out which dog belonged to which crew member by communicating through social media. Senior Master Sgt. Nathan Black, an F-16 fighter pilot assigned to the 356th Fighter Wing, had asked for permission to take his dogs for a walk around the base. But his requests were declined by base officials. Black used Facebook, Instagram and Snapchat to get to the bottom of the issue. On Feb. 13, he posted a picture of his dog tags with the names of two dogs, calling the dogs' owners "Uncle Cool" and "Uncle Not Cool." The photo started an internet conversation about how dogs, especially those who have been adopted into a military family, have names given to them by their owners. The post garnered more than 5,000 shares and received thousands of comments. As the story spread, Black's team at Combat Talon Air Base began investigating where the dog tags had come from. "I was blown away by the level of engagement by the [Department of Defense] and by the level of engagement of our enlisted force," Black told Stars and Stripes. "This is incredible." After about a week, Black said base officials informed him he was in fact, cool. "I didn't know the history, so we called the squadron commander and asked him. He said there was a mutual
