

The film is a comedy, comedy-drama and police procedural. Based on a true story, the plot follows a police team tracking down a stolen car with unexpected consequences. It was released in China by the Hong Kong-based company, Sparkle Roll Media, on July 19, 2012 and received a limited release in Hong Kong on July 24, 2012. Plot In the 1960s, Hong Kong policeman Ho Suk Chiu receives a tip-off from a young, asthmatic female informant named Hannah Ho. Ho meets her at a restaurant and says she has information about stolen car. Hannah is recruited to be the driver of the car while Ho will take up a position at the bottom. The duo, along with colleagues, travel to a rented house and park the car inside. After driving off, Hannah is pulled over by the police. She is too afraid to report the stolen car, but Ho treats her as an equal, and finally convinces her to tell the police where the car is. While the car was actually stolen by an independent thief and his accomplices, the police report Ho Suk Chiu as the stolen car's driver, and Hannah is arrested and sentenced to death. Ho Suk Chiu escapes with Hannah. Hannah has a daughter, Alicia. Ho Suk Chiu raises Hannah and their daughter, Alicia, in a forest and the former sets up an illegal business to support them. After Hannah's death, Ho Suk Chiu grows bitter and turns violent. The police eventually find Ho Suk Chiu in his village and he decides to take the law into his own hands. He eventually catches up to the original thief who had broken the law to obtain the stolen car and executes him, only to be arrested himself. Cast Aaron Kwok as Ho Suk Chiu Tony Leung Ka-fai as Inspector Chan Elaine Yiu as Alicia Ho Jackson Yee as Kwan Pang Ho Hung-pui as Kwan Yin-mo Kelly Hu as Hannah Wayne Lai as Police driver Production Casting and filming Filming for the film took place in Hong Kong and Vancouver. In early 2011, Aaron Kwok and Tony Leung Ka-fai were confirmed to be playing the lead roles. Andy On appeared as a small cameo as the driver of a red car, while Yue Siu-chi and Jackson Yee also played supporting roles. Two days before the main shooting day, the cast and crew of the film suffered minor injuries.
