Category: Roma Aeterna In the History of Science and Technology, the year 1768 has long been considered the origin of the digital clock that we use today. In this video, Peter Kollock, director of the University of Oxford's Museum of the History of Science, explains the story of the Antikythera Mechanism, which will be on display until February 21, 2011, at the university's New Museum, Waterstones Bookstore & Café. The mechanism was first unveiled in 1900, but the discovery of the object, which dates to around 100 BC, was made in 1900. Learn More

Getty Images If Jay Cutler didn't tell you anything you didn't know, it was because he didn't know much. Cutler can't remember what he did for the past 15 years, which is why his mind is on the NFL again and he's focused on being a starting quarterback, not a backup. That's the best news he's had all offseason. Cutler's word, in other words, is at least as good as Clay Matthews'. The Packers defensive end was asked by reporters last month if he'd heard from Cutler, who has been a regular in the locker room this offseason. Matthews said that he hadn't, but that he would be willing to chat with Cutler if he does. "When I get up, like I told you, I don't talk to him much," Matthews said. "If he wants to talk to me, I'll talk to him." At least Matthews won't hold Cutler's lack of football experience against him. He has plenty of his own to keep him busy, including a new team, a new quarterback, a new place to live, and a new role on the field. It's not exactly like he's been in a bunker with a shrink for the past 15 years. From the Packers' perspective, the best thing
