It's a Big Summer for Real Estate With summer right around the corner, the best time to plan a summer vacation is now. Real estate agents in a wide variety of markets can help customers plan their travel. Hawaii, California, and Arizona are hot destination spots for real estate shoppers and sellers. However, Southern California is often under-reported. If you want a great beach weekend, check out Manhattan Beach and Hermosa Beach in the San Fernando Valley. If you'd like a short drive to LA, explore Coronado Beach in San Diego and North San Diego County. Whether you're looking for a retreat or an adrenaline-rush vacation, you'll find plenty of options to choose from. There's no shortage of vacation homes for sale in the area, and properties are selling quickly. This week you'll find some impressive sales, thanks to the summer weather and lower prices. Many of the listings were taken on a fixed-price sale, which means the seller's asking price was non-negotiable. Other times, buyers are willing to pay a premium to not miss out. While you'll find bargains at the lower end of the spectrum in some markets, you'll also find excellent real estate in the $2,000-$4,000 range. My Favorite Real Estate Cliches Here are some common mistakes buyers make. Find them in your local area and avoid them when you search for a new home or sell your own: "I'm only interested in top-of-the-line homes." You may prefer more spacious areas, but that doesn't mean buyers in tight-knit communities want to pay the luxury tax. Vacation homes are often priced high to take advantage of their location and are in great demand. "I only want lakefront properties." Lakefront property is often in short supply. That doesn't mean you can't find properties with a view of the water. "I can't afford a vacation home." As a home seller, I heard it all. "I have to save for a down payment." "I have limited resources." "I need to focus on my job." It's not easy to make a purchase on a vacation. And in some cases ba244e880a
