The transport of proteins and other macromolecules from the cytoplasm to the nucleus involves the binding of nuclear import receptors to nuclear localization signals (NLSs) that are located on the cargoes. In the importin-5-NLS complex, importin-5 functions as the import receptor for NLS-cargoes and interacts with importin-alpha. The importin-5-NLS complex is phosphorylated by the Ser/Thr protein kinase at a serine residue (Ser-788) located in the D-domain. To understand how phosphorylation regulates nuclear import, we investigated the structure of the importin-5-NLS complex. Limited proteolysis of a native importin-5-NLS complex by trypsin and chymotrypsin revealed that the importin-5-NLS complex consists of multiple polypeptide components. Mass spectrometry demonstrated that the N-terminal 54-residue polypeptide corresponds to importin-5 and the N-terminal 52-residue polypeptide corresponds to importin-alpha. These results suggest that importin-5 is a heterodimer of importin-5 and importin-alpha, and the importin-5-NLS complex is phosphorylated at Ser-788 of the importin-5 heterodimer.Vladimir Putin received the last of the 21 new Russian tanks on Saturday, claiming the pieces of military hardware were needed to defend Russia from an anticipated U.S. attack in Syria.
