Below is a table detailing our progression: Objective and Kill Count Season 1: Started at around season 1, guild progression is pretty much dictated by how many people are in the guild. We are generally around 25% under 25, or roughly 5 players (including myself). It took us a while to figure out how to get our first objective, but once we did, we were able to advance through the whole game. Our first kill and our first objective was achieved on the first day of the season. We don't seem to be doing any better or worse in this next season as we are currently on day 11, and the progression is still going pretty much the same as the last two weeks. At the end of the season, we advanced to the second mission on the final day and succeeded with that, and then we managed to advance to the final objective with one of our members. We were able to pull out all of our kills and all of our objectives, with only two players dying. As it is the end of the season and the time of year where other guilds are starting their season, we ended up having to battle through one and a half more seasons before we could finalize it. Advantages / Disadvantages When I first started out, I wanted to get into this guild, but when I joined, I didn't really know what guild was or what it was like. So I had no idea what the guild was doing. By the end of the season, I found out what was going on and what it was like. We went on a couple of raids, we went on a raid at night where we had five other people with us, and we killed a boss. However, since I have been playing, I have realized that a guild is
