Meteosat-8/9/10 is a French-built geostationary weather satellite that was launched in November 2015. It is the eighth launch of the satellite on a Vega C rocket. Its main objective is to provide real-time imagery of the Earth's weather, climate, and land. Meteosat-8/9/10 collects data at a height of approximately 7,705 km (4,670 miles) above the Earth's surface, and it can capture images in the visible, infrared, and microwave ranges. It carries a payload of 2 focal planes, 3,305 CCD detectors, and 71 Radarsat-2 radar receivers. Its main mission period is from January 1, 2015 to November 30, 2022, although it may continue until 2023 if future launches are successful.
