Apparatus for applying a dispersive liquid to a substrate, and in particular to a silicon wafer, are known. In such an apparatus, a dispersive liquid is usually applied to a rotating substrate which is then rotated about its center and is withdrawn from a treatment zone. In order to insure that the dispersive liquid is applied uniformly to the substrate surface, the substrate is usually rotated at a uniform angular velocity. The apparatus further comprises a shroud which surrounds the substrate during the application of the dispersive liquid. The shroud can be of such a configuration as to provide a uniform flow of air and/or other gas over the substrate surface. Dispersion liquid application apparatus of the type described above are used in the fabrication of semic
